Statement of Reasons Pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3553(c)(2)

JACK B. WEINSTEIN, Senior District Judge:

Under 18 U.S.C. § 3553(c), a sentencing court is required to “state in open court the reasons for its imposition of the particular sentence.” 18 U.S.C. § 3553(c). If, however, the sentence is not of the kind or is outside the range of the sentencing guidelines as referred to in 3553(a)(4), the court is also required to state the specific reasons for imposing a sentence different from the guidelines. 18 U.S.C. § 3553(c)(2). These “reasons must also be stated with specificity in the written order of judgment and commitment.” Id. Even though the mandatory nature of the guidelines have been excised and they are now “advisory,” see United States v. Booker, 543 U.S. 220, 245-46 (2005), the sentencing court must still adhere to the requirements set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(c)(2). United States v. Jones, 460 F.3d 191, 197 (2d Cir. 2006). The sentencing court’s written statement of reasons need only be “a simple, fact-specific statement explaining why the guidelines range did not account for a specific factor or factors under § 3553(a).” United States v. Rattoballi, 452 F.3d 127, 138 (2d Cir. 2006). Although a written statement of reasons pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3553(c)(2) is not necessary when the court imposes a guideline sentence, such a statement may nevertheless assist the reviewing court and the United States Sentencing Commission in understanding the reasons for the court’s sentence.

On June 5, 2008, Robert Epifania pled guilty to Counts One and Two of a two-count fourth superseding information. Count One charged that between December 1999 and January 2008, Epifania, together with others, being a person employed by and associated with a criminal enterprise, conducted and participated in a pattern of racketeering activity. See 18 U.S.C. §§ 1962(c) and 1963(a). Count Two charged that between December 1999 and January 2008, Epifania, together with others, being a person employed by and associated with a criminal enterprise, conspired to engage in a pattern of racketeering activity. See 18 U.S.C. §§ 1962(d) and 1963(a). Within Counts One and Two, the defendant pled guilty to two specific racketeering acts. Racketeering Act One charged that between December 1999 and January 2008, Epifania, together with others, conspired to extort by obtaining cash payment relating to trucking concerns of John Doe #4, with John Doe #4's consent which was induced through wrongful use of actual and threatened force, violence and fear, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a). Racketeering Act Two charged that between December 2003 and January 2008, the defendant, together with others, conspired to extort by obtaining cash and check payments relating to profits from a Staten Island cement company operated by John Doe #4, with John Doe #4's consent which was induced through wrongful use of actual and threatened force, violence and fear, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1951(a).

Epifania was sentenced on September 19, 2008. The underlying superseding indictment against him was dismissed upon motion by the government. The proceeding was also videotaped in order to develop an accurate record of the courtroom atmosphere during sentencing and the various in-court factors and considerations that a district court must evaluate in imposing a sentence under 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a). See In re Sentencing, 219 F.R.D. 262, 264-65 (E.D.N.Y. 2004) (utility on appeal).

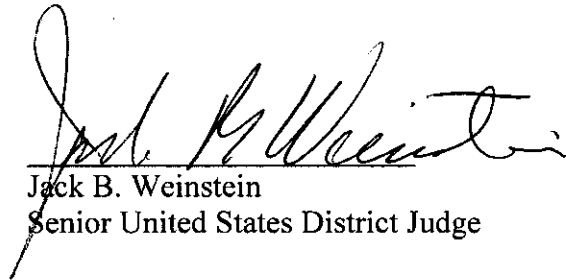

At sentencing, the court found the total offense level to be fourteen and defendant's criminal history category to be level II, yielding a guidelines range of imprisonment of between eighteen and twenty-four months. The offense also carried a maximum term of imprisonment of twenty years. See 18 U.S.C. § 1963(a). The guidelines range of fine was from $4,000 to $40,000. A two-level enhancement pursuant to U.S.S.G. § 2B3.2(b)(1) was applied because of the implied threat of violence in light of this defendant's status in the organized crime family, which carries an aura of force, violence and threats.

Epifania was sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment, three years supervised release and a fine of $4,000 payable within one year. A $200 special assessment was imposed. Any restitution owed to crime victims was left to be determined at an upcoming evidentiary hearing.

Respectful consideration was given to the sentencing guidelines, the Sentencing Commission's policy statements and all other factors listed under 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) to ensure that the sentence is "sufficient, but not greater than necessary, to comply with the purposes" of sentencing. 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a). A sentence within the guidelines is appropriate in this case. See 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a)(4)(A).

The court considered the "nature and circumstances of the offense and the history and characteristics of the defendant." See 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a)(1). The seriousness of the offense is obvious: the defendant is a member of a mob which uses violence and fear to maintain a stronghold on the region's construction and other industries. Epifania's wife is ill and the family's financial resources will be needed for her care, supporting a fine at the bottom of the guideline range, $4,000. A sentence at the lower end of the guideline range, eighteen months imprisonment, reflects the seriousness of the offense, will promote respect for the law and provide just punishment. See 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a)(2)(A).

Under section 3553(a)(2)(B), there are two major considerations: specific and general deterrence. General deterrence is satisfied with the sentence imposed. The sentence will send a clear message that any involvement in mafia-related activities will result in a substantial prison sentence. Specific deterrence is achieved through incapacitation. It is unlikely that the defendant will engage in further criminal activity in light of his family circumstances and work responsibilities.
